MERMOD & JACCARD'S.

Washington, Feb. 1.-An interesting phase of the Smithsonian Institution's preparation for the coming St. Louis Exposition is to be found in the Government taxidermists' shop. There, from a few boards, some papier mache and hides or costs of dermists' shop. There, from a few boards, some papier mache and hides or coats of fur, specimens of animal life are being made so realistically that if seen outside of an exhibition it would be difficult to distinguish them from live creatures.

When the workshop was visited last week the men were found putting the finishing touches on two or three beasts, which are to be sent as delegates to represent their division of the animal kingdom at the exhibition. One of them, a lion, had reached a stage of development where only the fur was needed to complete it. It stood in a lifelike ntitude, and its body of paste showed ribs and veins and muscles as naturally as that of a living animal. The other specimen is a rhinoceros. This was in a more unfinished state. Here and there one could see pieces of the wire sheeting which is used beneath the skin to pad it out to a semblance of the natural body. The head and feet were roughly outlined and the tail was as yet only a twist of rope.

In the adjoining room the bide was soak-and the tail was as yet only a twist of rope.

In the adjoining room the hide was soaking in a huge vat of salt and sulphuric acid, undergoing the tanning process preparatory to being placed on the figure. Whenever an animal dies at the National Zoo its skin, if at all valuable, is sent to the taxidermist. In this particular case, however, the rhinoceros hide was imported from South Africa. When brought here it weighed nearly a thousand pounds, but the steeping had shrunken it to half its original bulk.

In the same cask were lying a big of 4276A St. Ferdinand averitie, who ended his life with carbolic acid while standing under a window at No. 220 Walnut street Saturday night, deny that any love affair was the cause of the deed.

Kennedy was a married man. His relatives say there must have been some other reason for him taking his life. While he and his wife had been separated for some time they do not believe that prompted him to commit the act.

His wife, with her two little children, one going on 3 years of age, and the other 14 months old, were at the St. Ferdinand home yesterday awaiting the arrival of Kennedy's remains from the morgue.

According to Kennedy's sister, he was, at the house Saturday afternoon and appeared in good spirits, never intimating or acting that he was harboring trouble serious enough to cause him to end his life. None of his relatives can assign any cause for the deed, but they do not believe that he was enamored of the woman at the Walnut street house.

weighed nearly a thousand pounds, but the steeping had shrunken it to half its original bulk.

In the same cask were lying a big shark's head and skins of every variety going through the same preservation process which all animal coatings from the kid of the glovemaker to the hide of the whale must pass through before being used for practical purposes.

It must be admitted that the mural decorations and other furnishings of the workrooms are of a somewhat grewsome character. To stand under a celling festooned with the bones of deceased animals, to gaze upon shelves ornamented with skulis, or to trip accidentally over the foot of a wild beast, gives one plenty of local color, but it takes that to become accustomed to the suggestive atmosphere.

Among his accomplishments the chief taxidermist must possess a thorough knowledge of anatomy. He must understand modeling and be able to get the proportions for a whole specimen from a skull or toe bones, much as the student of geometry builds his figure upon the given sides and angles. When an order is sent in the designer takes his skin and skull, or whatever he has to build from, and gauges the other parts by comparing its relation to a standard skeleton.

Some times, as in the case of the exhibits to be sent to St. Louis, he goes to a menagerle to study from life. The next step is to set up the flat boards used to outline the legs and backbone. These are held in place by iron rods and are covered by wirenetting to give them the proper shape. The papier-mache, which is largely made of the pulp of old money and the susual paste and glue is used in the same manner as soulpour's clay. All of the details of the finishing work is done with it. It is the artistic part of the procees.

Ishing work is done with it. It is the artistic part of the process.

Finally, when the eyes have been put in place and the outer coat has been added, it is nearly two months since the commencement of the job; for, although an imitation lion or tiger may seem at first thought a simple affair, it is rather an intricate business to make a scientifically accurate reproduction of animal life from a board, a little wire, some paste and a piece of fur. yesterday at the New St. James.

shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. It is woman's greatest blessing. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this wonderful remedy. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Car little book, telling all about this liniment, will be sent free.
